Gov't borrows $1B to bail out Napocor

By Frederick Herzog

The National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of the 1992 Election Disputes, headed by Justice John O'Connor, has released its report. The report, titled "The Presidential Election Process: A Report of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of the 1992 Election Disputes," is a 100-page document that provides a detailed analysis of the 1992 election process and offers recommendations for reform.

The report identifies several key areas of concern, including the lack of uniformity in state election laws, the complexity of the electoral college system, and the potential for disputes over the results of the election. It also highlights the importance of transparency and accountability in the election process.

In response to these concerns, the report proposes a number of reforms, including the creation of a National Election Administration to oversee the election process, the implementation of uniform election laws, and the establishment of a system of judicial review to resolve election disputes.

The report is a comprehensive and thoughtful analysis of the 1992 election process, and its recommendations provide a clear path forward for reform. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the future of the U.S. election system.

RP-China Spratlys deal angers Vietnam

MANILA (Inquirer.net) — Vietnam's foreign ministry has expressed its anger over the Philippines' deal with China to jointly develop the Spratly Islands in the South China Sea. The ministry said the deal is a "violation of international law" and a "threat to Vietnam's sovereignty." It also accused the Philippines of "selling out" its interests to China.

The ministry's statement came after the Philippines and China signed a joint declaration on the Spratly Islands in May. The declaration calls for "joint development" of the islands and their surrounding waters. It also calls for "peaceful resolution" of any disputes. The ministry said the deal is a "violation of international law" and a "threat to Vietnam's sovereignty." It also accused the Philippines of "selling out" its interests to China.

SC warns lawyers, judges on land claims vs UP campus

By Philip C. Tubeza

THE SUPREME Court has warned lawyers and judges to stop entertaining "spurious" claims against the University of the Philippines' title to its Quezon City campus.

The warning came in the latest high court ruling dismissing yet another claim against the UP's ownership of a portion of its sprawling campus in Diliman.

"It is well past time for courts and lawyers to cease wasting their time and resources on these worthless causes and take judicial notice of the fact that UP's title had already been validated countless of times by this court," the high tribunal said.

"Any ruling deviating from such doctrine is to be viewed as a deliberate intent to sabotage the rule of law and will no longer be countenanced," it added.

Fake claims

The decision, dated Sept. 8 and released yesterday, affirmed a Court of Appeals ruling dismissing the claim of Domingo Canero over almost 5,000 sq. meters of land in the UP Diliman campus in Barangay Culiat, Tandang Sora.

The SC said the fake claims only "open the dissolute avenues of graft to unscrupulous land-grabbers who prey like vultures upon the campus of UP"

"By such actions, they wittingly or unwittingly aid the hucksters who want to earn a quick buck by misleading the gullible to buy the Philippine counterpart of the proverbial London Bridge," it added.

The state university owns and maintains several buildings in the area being claimed, including the Philcoa wet market, the Asian Institute of Tourism, the Philippine Social Sciences Building, the National Hydraulic Center, the UP Sewage Treatment Plant, the Petron gas station, the UP Arboretum, the Campus Landscaping Office, the Philippine Atomic Energy Commission building, and the Innotech building.

The tribunal said the appellate court was correct in ruling that the Quezon City regional trial court should have dismissed Canero's complaint.

Absolute absurdity

"It is an absolute absurdity to reconstitute existing certificates of title that are on file and available in the deeds of registry," the high court said.

It said that the lower court never acquired jurisdiction over the reconstitution proceedings since it had failed to notify the UP and adjoining property owners.

The high court also noted that Canero registered his title 18 years after the UP had registered its own title over the land.

"Where there are two certificates of title purporting to cover the same land, the person claiming under the certificate earlier registered is the rightful owner of the lot in dispute," the tribunal said.

It said Canero also never presented his so-called "designated caretakers," while UP was able to prove its possession over the land through the buildings and structures it had set up on the lot.

Last year, the SC affirmed the "validity and indefeasibility" of UP's title over its Diliman campus in two decisions in November 2003. In the two cases, the court upheld UP's claim against those of Jorge H. Chin and Renato B. Mallari.

FIRST SAVINGS SHUTDOWN

Solons blame BSP for bank's collapse

By E. Michael O. Rosales

SENATORS yesterday grouped up to sue the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas for its alleged failure to act early to prevent the collapse of First Savings Bank which it shut down the other day after the bank failed to meet some three days of withdrawals.

Cyprianos Sumarto Aquilino, President of and Sergio Omeña III, advised the BSP for being late in its supervision of the bank-occupied bank which services mostly public sector workers and other small depositors.

"I think they are sleeping on the job," Omeña told reporters, as he wanted the BSP for allowing the bank to continue operations despite reports that 45 percent of its loans were non-performing while its capital had been depleted by 78 million in the last three years.

"When they allowed this bank to reach 70 percent in non-performing loans it was beyond fix," he said. The bank should have been closed earlier for the very reasons, Omeña said. Omeña said he has asked Sen. Edgardo Jaraque, who chairs the Senate Banking Committee, to look into the First Savings case.

Sen. Mike Defensor also wants a Senate inquiry into the collapse of First Savings which he said the BSP had put the bank under close monitoring and surveillance since 2002.

"The main concern is to ensure BSP officials were aware the bank had been having problems," Defensor said in a statement. "They had received a lot of complaints earlier, except they were not aware because of government intervention. BSP officials later became the victims of many lawsuits."

Defensor said the BSP's problems stemmed from "another 30-40 loans that became bad loans." Omeña said that the bank was guilty of a lack of a corporate or national character, and that it was a victim of its own mistakes.

He also asked the public to be wary of banks that offer high interest rates on savings and other deposit accounts, saying that the BSP had been offering 10-12 percent interest on its savings accounts.

Defensor said the amount of interest "wasn't really high" compared to other banks.

In a statement, Financial and the BSP has in "fully explain" to the public its failure to save the bank.

"There is something wrong in the way they are supervising the banks because this thing could not have happened if there is a clear supervision of the banking system," the Senate Banking Committee said.

Financial and the BSP should have "stepped in" at the first signs that the BSP was in trouble to make possible depositors and protect a bank run.

Sen. Romeo Napagano Jr. said the BSP should closely track or monitor the public's "who are the wrong banks and who are the big wrong banks. Then the public is informed and can decide where to put their money," he said.

But Omeña said the leadership of Napagano's proposal was that depositors might take one (bad) money in their hands if they found out that a bank was not responsible in the future.

"We need to be transparent, let us be more open with the public, let us be more open with the public, and let us be more open with the public," he said.

SC tightens up on use of vehicles

By Philip C. Salazar

CYBER JUDGE Wilson Brando Jr. has tightened the rules on the use of Supreme Court vehicles and placed under the government's ownership.

Brando issued a memorandum to the SC, ordering that all of the Supreme Court vehicles should be used for official purposes only.

The Supreme Court vehicle shall be used for public service and for the use of the public interest, as the court, including, especially, in the case of the official use of the court.

Brando said that the vehicle should not be used for private purposes, such as for the use of the court, including, especially, in the case of the official use of the court.

The memorandum applies to all SC vehicles, including those in the Presidential Palace, the Court, the Office of the Court Administrator, the Philippine Judicial Academy, and the Judicial Branch Council.

The rules, however, would not apply to the vehicles assigned to the Chief Justice and the 12 Associate Justices.

Brando said all SC vehicles assigned to officials and not to specific officials must be kept in the court's compound except when used for an authorized purpose.

The vehicle must be returned to the court for use by the court. SC officials shall be responsible for the use of the vehicle and shall be held responsible for the use of the vehicle.

Brando said that, effective Jan. 1, 2004, the court's authorized vehicles and services shall be the first choice along United Nations Avenue in Manila.

S. Korea admits nuke arms bid in early '80s

SEOUL, South Korea, Oct. 10 (AP) — South Korea's government admitted on Monday that it secretly sought nuclear weapons in the early 1980s, a move that could lead to international sanctions.

The admission came in a report by the government's own intelligence agency, the National Intelligence Service, which said the bid was made by a senior government official.

The report said that the official, who was a member of the government's security council, had been in contact with a North Korean agent who offered to provide South Korea with nuclear weapons.

The report also said that the official had been in contact with a North Korean agent who offered to provide South Korea with nuclear weapons, and that the official had been in contact with a North Korean agent who offered to provide South Korea with nuclear weapons.

Erythromycin can trigger cardiac deaths, says study

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—A widely cited statistic that was long considered safe has been overturned: The risk of cardiac arrest, particularly when taken with water-pumped drugs for congestive heart failure, is not negligible, a large study has found.

The drug is erythromycin, which has been on the market for 50 years and is prescribed for everything from strep throat to syphilis.

The new study shows the need for continuing research on the safety of older medicines, including how they interact with newer drugs, said researcher Vibeke B. Ray, a professor of preventive medicine at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tennessee.

Take alone, erythromycin doesn't alter the body's risk of sudden cardiac death among patients in the study.

In patients taking other drugs, however, that risk rose sharply, especially in combination with the blood thinners used to prevent strokes and heart attacks. The researchers found that patients taking the two together had a 10-fold greater risk of dying from a heart attack than those taking either drug alone.

"This is an even riskier high risk," Ray said.

Ray is part of the research of the professor and director of the cardiovascular laboratory at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark. "It was clear that erythromycin is a generally safe drug."

But when taken with other drugs, it can cause a slight risk increase of a rare but fatal rupture in the heart's wall, usually in people who have the drug in combination. However, the study shows that the risk is not as high as it was said.

The study, in The New England Journal of Medicine, was the first to systematically document the risk. It found no death rate among those who used erythromycin pills—usually sold as a generic—along with certain medications for cholesterol and calcium channel blockers for high blood pressure.

Ray said the danger seems to come from other drugs slowing the breakdown of erythromycin, which increases its concentration. At high levels, it may act inside resting heart muscle cells, prolonging the time until the next heartbeat starts, and sometimes triggering an abnormal, potentially fatal, rhythm.

The findings show doctors should choose an alternative antibiotic. Ray said, at least when prescribing the drugs that interact, doctors should, as they popular antibiotic, should be careful.

By [illegible]

Law enforcement officials are being urged to cite drivers of government vehicles who are caught driving recklessly, according to a new report.

High standards

The report, which was released by a committee of the House of Representatives, says that government vehicles should be held to the same standards as private vehicles. It also calls for stricter enforcement of traffic laws for government drivers.

Even traffic

The report also calls for better training for government drivers and for more oversight of their driving records. It says that the current system is too lenient and that it is time to hold government drivers accountable for their actions on the road.

DTI lifts ban on Solid Cement

By Richard H. Thompson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP) — The Department of Transportation has lifted a ban on the use of solid cement in the construction of bridges and other structures, a move that could save billions of dollars in construction costs.

The ban, which was imposed in 1990, was based on concerns that solid cement would be too brittle to withstand the stresses of heavy traffic and seismic activity. However, recent research has shown that solid cement can be made strong enough to meet these requirements.

The new rule allows the use of solid cement in bridges and other structures, provided that the cement is made to meet certain strength and durability standards. The rule also requires that the cement be tested and certified by a qualified testing agency.

The move is expected to lead to a significant increase in the use of solid cement in bridge construction, particularly in the Midwest and South. It is also expected to lead to a reduction in the cost of bridge construction, as solid cement is generally less expensive than other materials used in bridge construction.

BER eases back taxes from ecozine firms

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (AP) — The German government has agreed to ease back taxes on firms that produce ecozines, a move that could encourage more firms to produce environmentally friendly products.

The move is part of a broader effort by the government to encourage the production of environmentally friendly products. It is also part of a broader effort to reduce the government's carbon footprint.

The new rule allows firms that produce ecozines to claim a tax credit of up to 10% of the cost of production. This credit can be used to offset the firm's tax liability for the year in which the product is produced.

The move is expected to lead to a significant increase in the production of ecozines, particularly in the construction and manufacturing sectors. It is also expected to lead to a reduction in the government's carbon footprint, as ecozines are generally made from recycled materials and are more energy-efficient than other products.

SWX takes credit for stocks surge

SWX, the Swiss stock exchange, has taken credit for a recent surge in stock prices, a move that could encourage more firms to list on the exchange.

The move is part of a broader effort by SWX to encourage the listing of firms on the exchange. It is also part of a broader effort to increase the exchange's visibility and attract more investors.

The new rule allows firms that list on the exchange to claim a tax credit of up to 10% of the cost of listing. This credit can be used to offset the firm's tax liability for the year in which the firm lists on the exchange.

The move is expected to lead to a significant increase in the number of firms listing on the exchange, particularly in the technology and financial sectors. It is also expected to lead to an increase in the exchange's trading volume, as more firms list on the exchange.

High-tech supercenters

MANILA, Philippines—A new wave of high-tech supercenters is being built in the Philippines, and it is expected to revolutionize the way businesses and consumers interact. The centers, which are being built by a consortium of local and foreign companies, will offer a wide range of services, from retail to financial, all under one roof. The first center, located in the heart of Manila, is expected to open next year. It will be the largest of its kind in the Philippines, and it is expected to attract a large number of customers. The centers are being built as part of a larger initiative to modernize the Philippine economy and to attract foreign investment. The initiative is being led by a group of private sector companies, including a major telecommunications company and a large retail chain. The centers are being built in a strategic location, and they are expected to become a major hub for business and commerce in the Philippines.

There are Over 1000 small, low-key, family-run businesses in the UK, many of which are struggling to survive in the current economic climate. The UK's small business sector is a vital part of the economy, providing employment for millions of people and contributing significantly to the country's GDP. However, many of these businesses are facing challenges such as increased competition, rising costs, and changing consumer preferences. I STILL can't get over seeing Anne Hayden's endorsement of Anne's Beauty Fragrances. It seems daring and daring that you'd display all bodies for perfume and taking over the fragrance field. It has been going on for quite some time now. Not people who stand up and back either while Jennifer Lopez comes out with Glow by J.Lo. and the latest, 2008. The latter did not take off like the first, probably because some other is better. Besides (the much publicized success between the Milich and Lopez, which inspired the last engagement ring on SM's Smith) seemed to work.

The iconic, of course, came with a whole range of body care products for RESEARCH has shown that people's attitudes change and have evolved dramatically over time. For example, at the time of the Vietnam War, the public was largely in support of the war. By the end of the war, however, public opinion had shifted dramatically, and the war was widely seen as a mistake.

and finished by the 1980s. The 1980s, however, have been a decade of stagnation for the world's major economies. In the United States, the economy has been in a state of "stagflation," with high inflation and low growth. In Japan, the economy has been in a state of "stagnation," with low inflation and low growth. the agencies will, in turn, be able to identify and respond to the needs of the community. The FBI, for example, is working with the Justice Dept. to develop a national database of violent crimes, which would help law enforcement agencies track down offenders and prevent future attacks.

Another key element of the plan is the creation of a national network of law enforcement agencies. This network would be made up of federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies, as well as private security firms. The network would be able to share information and resources, and would be able to coordinate efforts to prevent and respond to terrorist attacks.

The plan also calls for the creation of a national center for the study of terrorism. This center would be responsible for collecting and analyzing information about terrorist activities, and would be able to provide advice and assistance to law enforcement agencies.

Finally, the plan calls for the creation of a national system of public safety. This system would be responsible for providing information to the public about potential terrorist threats, and would be able to coordinate efforts to prevent and respond to terrorist attacks.

The plan is a comprehensive and ambitious one, and it is clear that the federal government is committed to doing whatever it takes to protect the American people from terrorism. It is our hope that this plan will be successful in preventing and responding to terrorist attacks, and in keeping the American people safe.
